

UK HOME OFFICE TO ADVANCE SPEND VISIBILITY, SAVINGS AND COMPLIANCE WITH SOFTWARE SUITE

Home Office Group Automates Spend Analysis, Sourcing and Contract Management with Software from Emptoris

London, UK (June 2009) Emptoris, Inc., a leading global provider of enterprise supply and contract management software, today announced that the Home Office of the UK Government – incorporating UK Borders Agency, Identity & Passport Service and Criminal Records Bureau – have now fully deployed the company's Spend Analysis, Sourcing and Contract Management solutions to better manage its £1.8bn per annum spend on goods and services. After a detailed Procurement process in 2008, the Home Office selected to implement the entire Emptoris Supply and Contract Management software suite to support its transformation of the Procurement function.

"The Home Office embarked upon a journey to transform its commercial and procurement function two years ago with a focus on investing and improving our people, process and technology capability. The implementation of the Emptoris Product is a key milestone in this transformational journey and will help us identify and realize significant cost saving opportunities through more effective management of our Supply Chain," said John Collington, Group Commercial Director for the Home Office. "In addition, the fact that we are the first Public Sector customer of Emptoris to host this world class solution on an internal secure platform enables us to leverage the product across Government Departments."

Justin Sadler Smith, Public Sector Director at Emptoris, Inc., noted that the Home Office Deployment is a superb example of how Emptoris Technology can effectively support a Holistic Procurement Transformation.

Emptoris solutions are available to UK public sector organizations under a Government Department Approved Framework.
